

Why Is . . .

Did you know there is no lead in pencil lead?

The center of the pencil is made of a comparatively nontoxic form of carbon called graphite.

Before the discovery of graphite (in the 1500s), soft metals such as lead were often used for writing.

One early name for graphite was 'black lead', and the name 'lead' has remained in use.